

Core B: Literary Terms Index

Plot Structure	Plot Devices	Literary Devices	Characterization
Allegory	a story that has a second meaning beneath the surface. The characters, objects, or events in the story stand for another person, idea, or moral principle.
Antagonist	character(s) or situation that represents the opposition against which the protagonist must contend. The antagonist is an obstacle that the protagonist must overcome.
Alliteration	the practice of beginning several consecutive or neighboring words with the same sound. (“The twisting trout twinkled below.”)
Allusion	a reference to a mythological, literary, or historical person, place, or thing. (“He met his Waterloo.”)
Anti-hero	protagonist who lacks conventional morals, and who struggles for values which are not considered admirable.
Character Development	the craft of giving a character a personality, depth, and motivations that propel them through a story. Also defined as how a character evolves throughout the course of a story.
Character Traits	all the aspects of a character’s behavior and attitudes that make up that person’s personality. Often portrayed using descriptive adjectives.
Chekov’s Gun	an object mentioned early in a story that does not take on significance until later.
Cliffhanger	an ending in a chapter or scene that creates suspense by leaving a question unanswered or event unresolved.
Climax	the turning point in any story. It is the highest point of tension or drama in the plot. Often, the climax is also when the main problem of the story is faced and solved by the protagonist.
Conflict	literary element that involves a struggle between two opposing forces, usually the protagonist and antagonist. Generally expressed in one of the following ways: <ol style="list-style-type: none"><li>1. Man v. Man – conflict that pits one person against another</li><li>2. Man v. Self – character battles some aspect of him-/herself</li><li>3. Man v. Nature – character must confront, or try to assert dominance over nature</li><li>4. Man v. Society – conflict in which character fights against some aspect of society</li><li>5. Man v. Divine or Supernatural – character is trapped by some kind of inescapable fate, challenging their freedom and/or free will</li><li>6. Man v. Technology – conflict that focuses on a character attempting to prevail against machines or other technology</li></ol>
Deus ex machina	(Latin for “god from a machine”) an unexpected or improbable end to a story, usually as a result of some divine, magical, or extraordinary solution.
Diction	the words or phrases used by a writer to evoke a specific emotional response.
Direct Characterization	details about character that are presented openly through direct statements from the narrator or other characters.
Dynamic (character)	character who changes over time, usually as a result of resolving a central conflict or facing a major crisis. Tend to be central rather than peripheral characters.

Exposition	beginning of a story in which the author introduces the characters, setting, basic plot, and often sets up the main conflict.
Falling Action	action that occurs after the climax, leading toward the resolution.
Flashback	a scene that interrupts the action of the narrative to show a previous event.
Flat (character)	character with only one kind of personality trait or characteristic.
Foil (character)	any character whose personal qualities contrast with another character (usually the protagonist), helping the reader understand more about the other character
Foreshadowing	the use of hints or clues in a narrative to suggest future action
Hyperbole	a deliberate, extravagant, and often outrageous exaggeration; it may be used for either serious or comic effect. (“The shot heard ‘round the world.’”)
Idiom	an accepted phrase or expression having a meaning different from the literal. (to drive someone up the wall.)
Imagery	the words or phrases a writer uses that appeal to the senses.
Indirect Characterization	details about character that are made through inferences (logical conclusions and/or educated guesses) from the text. May come through actions or reactions to others, through speech/word-choice, how they interact with setting, etc.
Irony	when that which is said or done is the opposite of what is expected. there are three types: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Verbal irony – when a speaker or narrator says one thing while meaning the opposite; sarcasm is a form of verbal irony. (“It is easy to stop smoking. I’ve done it many times.”)</li> <li>2. Situational irony -- when a situation turns out differently from what one would normally expect. (a deep sea diver drowning in a bathtub is ironic.)</li> <li>3. Dramatic irony – when a character or speaker says or does something that has different meaning from what he or she thinks it means, though the audience and other characters understand the full implications. (Anne Frank looks forward to growing up, but we, as readers, know that it will never be.)</li> </ol>
Juxtaposition	when an author places two concepts, characters, ideas, or places near or next to each other so that the reader will compare and contrast them. (“All’s fair in love and war.”)
Metaphor	a comparison of two unlike things not using “like” or “as.” (“Time is money.”)
Mood	the atmosphere or predominant emotion in a literary work experienced by the reader.
Onomatopoeia	a word that imitates the natural sound of things (thump, boom, buzz, splash, roar)
Oxymoron	a form of paradox that combines a pair of opposite terms into a single unusual expression (“sweet sorrow” or “cold fire.”)
Paradox	occurs when the elements of a statement contradict each other. Although the statement may appear illogical, impossible, or absurd, it turns out to have a coherent meaning that reveals a hidden truth. (“Less is more.” “The only constant is change.”)
Parallelism	words or phrases that are syntactically similar. (“that government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth”)

Personification	giving human characteristics to something that is not human such as an animal, an inanimate object, an idea. (“The wind cried in the dark.”)
Protagonist	central character in the story and is often referred to as the main character. He/she is faced with a conflict that must be resolved. The protagonist may not always be admirable (see “Anti-hero”); nevertheless, he/she must command involvement, and even empathy, on the part of the reader.
Repetition	when an author chooses to repeat a word, phrase, or sentence throughout the text. Aside from helping stress or highlight important thoughts and points, repetition can be a key tool for authors in developing style, mood, and rhythm.
Resolution	the conclusion of a story’s plot and is a part of a complete conclusion to a story.
Rising Action	the section of the plot leading up to the climax, in which the tension stemming from the story's central conflict grows through successive plot developments
Round (character)	any character with a complex personality in which the audience sees many different kinds of traits. Often portrayed as a conflicted or contradictory person.
Setting	the time and place in which the story takes place, providing the backdrop for the story and helping to set the mood. It can also include social statuses, weather, historical period, and details about immediate surroundings. Settings can be real or fictional, or a combination of both real and fictional elements.
Simile	a comparison of two different things or ideas using words such as “like” or “as.” (“The warrior fought like a lion.”)
Static (character)	character who does not change over the course of the plot; personality does not evolve
Stock (character)	characters who have become conventional or stereotypical through repeated use in particular types of stories. Stock characters are instantly recognizable and are typically both flat and static (damsel in distress, mad scientist, boy next door, etc.).
Suspense	a quality that makes the reader or audience uncertain or tense about the outcome of events.
Symbol	any object, person, place, or action that has both a meaning in itself and that stands for something larger than itself, such as a quality, attitude, belief, or value. (a tortoise represents slow but steady progress)
Theme	the central message of a literary work. It is expressed as a sentence or general statement about life or human nature. A literary work can have more than one theme, and most themes are not directly stated but are implied. (pride often precedes a fall.)
Tone	the writer’s or speaker’s attitude toward a subject, character, or audience; it is conveyed through the author’s choice of words (diction) and details. Tone can be serious, humorous, sarcastic, indignant, etc.
Twist Ending	An unexpected occurrence or turn of events at the end of the story that completely changes the direction or outcome of the plot from the direction it was likely to go.
Understatement	the opposite of hyperbole. It is a kind of irony that deliberately represents something as being much less than it really is. (“I could probably manage to survive on a salary of two million dollars per year.”)